the ancient Empire will be well represented tory as it dieplays a genuine desire on the part of the Chinese to take part in induswhat they can do in the production of useful and beautiful works. This readiness to take part in such an exhibition, so far distant, is indeed better evidence of progressiveness than any acquisition of gunboats, improved arms, or an attempt at military reorganization could possibly be considered. The advantages to be obtained by exhibiting specimens of the art and industries of China are obvious, and have not failed to strike the practical Chinese mind. Moreover, the fact that the exhibition of Japanese productions in Europe and America has been the means of creating a large demand for their lacquered wares in those markets cannot have failed to reach China, and has created a laudable spirit of rivalry among the Chinese. The Chinese produce various articles which are excellent in their line and decidedly characteristic, certain to excite attention and likely to create demand, though in general taste and finish of workmanship they are inferior to Japanese goods. At the same time Chinese wares have their distinctive merits, and will prove eminently attractive to the lovers of the curious and grotesque.

That the effort now being made to secure a

> AFRICAN RECRUITS FOR THE FRENCH ARMY.

If England succeeds in making good soldiers out of the Indians, why should not France at. tempt the same thing with the Africans ? This is what M. Gabriel Charmes asks in a long article in the Journal des Débats :- " Though the men of India are exceedingly peaceful, the English convert them into very good soldiers, who are not only sufficient to protect the empire, but whom they can transport wherever British. interests require, either to Cyprus or the banks of the Nile. We have, on the contrary, in Africa races of men which are naturally warlike, and which are of no use to us. Algeria and Tunis compal us to keep there 100,000 mon, who, should any complication arise in Europe, would be of great value to us. Would it not be better to replace our troops by native ones? General Molière estimated in 1845 that 200,000 or 300,000 men could be obtained for the Army in Algiers." The Debate concludes as follows :- If the future of France, as we firmly believe, lies in Africa, it would be a fortunate thing if on the French coast of the Mediterranean a first experiment could be made. The similarity of the climate and the nature of the soil might convert the province into a sort of link botween France and Northern Africa."

Grindrod, Jenkins and Co. of Colombo, is at present at Madras for parposes of interviewing Mr. Grant Duff on the subject of outting a canal through the island of Ramisaram, between the Gulf of Manaar and Park Straits. " He is said to be noting as the representative of capitalists at home, who are prepared to subscribe the necessary capital for the work without any guarantee from the Indian Government. All they ask is a concession to carry out the project. It is estimated that the canal would save steamers from three to four days in the voyage from London to Madras and Caloutta and vice veral, and of working expenses of steamers. The channel it would take to execute the work. The scheme present Panmben passage for native crafts is not affected by it." -Straits Times.

God be praised for the same." Thereupon His Highness adds :-"An officious porrespondent, a foreigner, well known to you, writing from London on the 18th of August, informs us that the English newspapers on the slleged authority of some British residents at Zanzibar had published a report to the effect that we had purposed to assist Arabi Pasha with money, stores, and men. XTRACTS. EARTH.

With what a glory breaks the dawn Above the purple eastern hills ! Each day the world answ is born, With all her thousand streams and rills, With all her vernal glens and woods Her mighty sea, her quiet lakes, Her stately mountain solitudes, Where mortal step no echo wakes

" Oh, what a varied language swells From out her broad, harmonious breast! Her tongue of life and grandour tells Of joy and hearty, peace and rest. On every side her music flows. On every side her charms are seen, From icy Winter's frosts and snows . To golden Summer's shades of green. No power profance her voice sublime.

No stain her growing beauty mars, As in the azure dome of Time She smiles among the sister stars. O man, thou child of mortal birth, Thou child of sorrow and of fear, He whose broad arm upholds the earth Is not unmindful of thy tear!
